1. Values Statement

We believe that every person with autism should be able to live the life they choose.

All staff are required to adhere to the principles and values set out in the National Autistic Society (NAS) Ethical Framework and endeavour to embed them in their daily working ethos and routines.

2. Scope

This policy applies to all National Autistic Society schools, children and adult services where autistic individuals and their families receive direct and indirect support and as an organisation, we have a duty of care towards the individuals and respective families we support. This policy relates to all aspects of individuals' behaviour, across the education, residential and adult settings as well as when out in the community.

It should be read, in conjunction with other NAS policies and guidance including: Positive Behaviour Support Procedure SO-0028, Safeguarding Adults Policy (SO-0194), Safeguarding Children's Policy (SO-0189), Restrictive Practices Intervention Policy (RPI) (SO-0039), Anti- Bullying Policy (SO-0193), Incidents leading to a near miss reporting and the High-risk support needs framework.

3. Purpose

This policy sets out how all NAS Services promote and develop an understanding of Positive Behaviour Support (PBS), and its application within all service settings.

It aims to outline the key philosophical underpinning identified within PBS, as a broad framework for developing person centred PBS plans/Combined records, and approaches for individuals receiving a service at the NAS.

4. Introduction

Positive Behaviour Support (PBS) is an evidence-based approach that brings together the value base of person-centred approaches.

It does so with the overall aim of improving the quality of a person's life, and that of the people around them. This includes all individuals throughout their lifespan.

PBS supports human rights and promotes respect, dignity, inclusion and a life without unnecessary restriction. PBS means treating people equally and working in partnership with each individual and their family to improve their quality of life (QoL) and make things better for everyone.

PBS is about providing the right support at the right time for an individual, so they can lead a meaningful, fulfilling and interesting life, participating in activities and learning new skills. It is a long-term multi-component framework (BILD, 2013), following the person throughout their life and providing opportunities within and without each service, so that growth enable each individual and their families to reach their full potential.

PBS uses different methods to gather information to work out what each individual's behaviour means - its function and/or message behind the action. There is a focus on conducting in-depth functional assessments using evidence-based tools to enable staff teams to better understand the individual they support, thus enabling services to improve the support offered.

By doing this, PBS empowers all involved to adopt more efficient, positive, and less harmful ways to fulfil their individual needs. These can range from developmental, educational, social, psychological, biological needs, which forms the foundations for a meaningful and fulfilling life (QoL). This often involves using a range of different approaches that enhance an individual's life, including functional skill teaching, active support, the development of functional communication skills, the development of emotional self-regulation skills all in the context of the and individual's environment.

There is a recognition that PBS is most effective when it's systems and values are embedded throughout a whole service or organisation. The NAS promotes the use of system level interventions including the SPELL framework, Practice Leadership, Person-Centred Active Support, Reflective practice, Quality of Life Framework and investing and promoting support in staff wellbeing and their development.
